

"LEAGUE OPPONENTS' WITH JAUNDICED EYES WILL BE HANGED ON GIBBETS"

WILSON TELLS KANSAS CITY PEOPLE IN SPEECH TEEMING WITH EMOTION

CONDEMNATION OF OPPONENTS IS INCREASING AS PRESIDENT GETS NEARER TO WESTERN COUNTRY

WILL SPEAK AT OMAHA TONIGHT

CONVENTION HALL, KANSAS CITY, Sept. 6—"Treaty opponents who view the peace treaty and league of nations with jaundiced eyes; who are against it because they have private political interests will at least be gibbeted and they will regret that the gibbet will be so high." This is what President Wilson told his Kansas City audience here this morning. He reiterated that league opponents must put up or shut up and declared that a putting down of the present plan with putting up anything in its stead was pure "boishevism." Further he said that he respected the man who honestly but ignorantly opposed the league but that he had nothing but contempt for the man who opposed it for selfish interests.

By HUGH BAILEE
United Press Correspondent

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—Constituents of Senator Reed, one of the principal opponents of the peace treaty and league of nations are to hear President Wilson's arguments for the league today. Kansas City is Senator Reed's home town.

The President apparently is making an effort to strip the treaty of all its technicality and obscurity and present it as a "human" document. The keynote of his addresses have been that the nation is approaching a new era in its international relations and that if the verdict is against the treaty the result will strike to the very homes of the people. Failure of the treaty, he tells the audiences, will make of America a militarist power facing disappointed nations and subject to the hate and revenge of her old time enemies.

With every speech his criticism and ridicule of United States senators is growing in acerbity and by the time he reaches the Pacific coast it is hard to tell by what name he will call them. The old sedate dignified school master is gone. In his stead there appears before the western audiences a man with a vision of the future, a firm belief in the right of the course he has taken and a growing dislike for those who do not agree with him and are in a position to hold up his will.

By L. C. MARTIN

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 6—With Senate opponents of the peace treaty and league of nations planning a tour of the country over which President Wilson is now speaking they are also counting noses to determine their voting strength. A leading Democratic senator today declared that twenty Democrats will vote for reservations to the treaty while twenty-seven will vote for unqualified ratification.

Every utterance of the President while on his tour tends to solidify the opposition to the league and his constant references to senators as men who do not know their business; do not know their constituents and men who do not understand the treaty is forcing them to take counter action in words even stronger than those of the President. Yesterday Senator Sherman characterized the President as a "demagogue" when he was shown the text of the President's address in which Wilson declared that several plans under the peace treaty would be carried out whether the peace treaty was signed or not. This involved the meeting in American soil of an international committee under the league plan.

COMPERS DECLINES TO MAKE PUBLIC REPLY RECEIVED FROM PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6—Samuel Compers today received a reply from President Wilson to his wife asking that the President use his influence to get a conference for the steel workers committee with Chairman Gary of the U. S. Steel corporation. Compers declined to make known the contents of the reply saying that it would be indecible to do so when the President has not seen fit to make it public. The reply makes known the course the President will pursue. Next Tuesday the twenty-four presidents of steel workers unions are to meet here and it is expected that the reply will be read to them at that time.

SURVEYOR MANAGER ANSWERS SPECTATOR

Surveyor, Pa. Sept. 4, 1919
Editor Clearfield Progress:

I noticed in your issue of September 2nd a statement signed "spectator," which attempted to make explanation of the circumstances leading up to the forfeiting of a game to Karthaus by the Surveyor team, which refused to stand for the open highway robbery of the Karthaus umpire and people.

The matter concerning "imported players" has nothing to do with the case whatever as both sides got the best they could and while the Karthaus scribe says Long and Montgomery were from Bellefonte, Mr. Long, who is a gentleman, told me himself he was from the Toronto, Canada, International League team.

We will endeavor to give the facts as we saw them and let the public decide who showed the yellow streak.

The trouble occurred in the sixth inning. The score stood 1 to 0 when Surveyor came to bat. We had two men out and the bases filled. Montgomery was in the box winding up to deliver the ball to the batter, who already had one strike. The runner on third saw a chance to steal home and broke for the plate. The pitcher failed to note the runner speeding for home and delivered the ball as he thought to the batter. Catcher Rees left his position back of the bat and jumping in front of the plate intercepted the throw and put the ball on the runner as he slid into home.

Umpire Lewis mistakenly called the runner out. As manager of the Surveyor team I protested against the decision which was palpably wrong and in violation of the rules and asked Lewis to reverse his ruling and while he appeared willing to do so Potter and the other Karthaus people would not allow him to do so. Montgomery told Lewis and Potter that the decision was wrong but Jay said "to hell with them; we won't give it to them, right or wrong." Seeing there was no chance for a square deal from that crowd where the manager was unfair and the umpire had to obey his orders, we refused to be robbed and I called the team from the field.

Then to get even and make it a real outcry Manager Potter skinned us out of the $10 guarantee promised us for coming down to play.

We make reply to "Big Noise" Schnarrs ("Spectator") because we wish to warn all other teams against going to Karthaus if they want a square deal. Also if you are going to deal with these tin horn sports get your guarantee first, because if they can beat you out of it by any pretext they sure will do it.

Manager Potter and his gang don't care a bit more for a dollar than a farmer does for one of his eyes.

Kindly give this space as I want to nail the fairy tale "Big Noise" had you print.

POPULAR SHOEMAKER HOME

Antonio Aveni, who before he war conducted a shoe repairing shop in the Staver block on Third street, has returned to Clearfield. He left here in October, 1917 and before going was forced to dispose of a thriving business. He was a real patriotic sacrifice and should be heart in business again we bespeak for him a liberal share of patronage. While "over there" he got a furlough and visited his wife and child in Italy. Mr. Aveni expects to bring his family to the United States in the near future.

WILL BUILD MINE SIDING

Contractor H. L. Connelly has begun the building of a mine siding for the Grampian Coal Mining company at Grampian.

FIRE CHIEF HOPFER RESIGNS POSITION

The regular meeting of the Clearfield Fire Department was held in the Elk Hose company's parlor last evening and was largely attended by the firemen of the four companies making up the department.

On account of his having moved out of the borough Fire Chief Hopfer presented his resignation, which was accepted by the department with regret. First Assistant Ira Jay, of the Second Ward company was advanced to Chief to fill out the unexpired term of ex-chief Hopfer.

Notice was received from a U. S. army disbursing officer that the ten army gas masks ordered for the department had been shipped and should be here any day now.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Whereas, Ed. B. Case, member of the Third Ward Hose Co., and for several years past the careful and efficient treasurer of the Clearfield Fire Department, is a candidate for re-election to the office of Register and Recorder of Clearfield county at the county September primary election. Bro. Case has long been an active fireman and one of the most energetic, hardworking members in this department. In view of the fact that war conditions greatly added to the work of the Register & Recorder's office during the term now drawing to a close without adequate compensation therefor we believe Bro. Case to be entitled to another term under normal conditions and also that his efficient conduct of the office should commend him to the voters of the county. Therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Clearfield Fire Department unanimously endorse the candidacy of Ed. B. Case for the office of Register and Recorder of Clearfield county and urge all firemen and citizens generally who believe in rewarding faithful, efficient public service to rally to his support and assist him in securing re-nomination and re-election to this office.

A resolution endorsing the candidacy of M. M. Overly of Elk Hose company for the nomination for county treasurer was also unanimously adopted.

Delegate Martin Seffend made his report on the District Convention at Houtzdale, after which the meeting adjourned. The next meeting of the department will be held at the Third Ward Hose House Friday October 3d.

At the opening of court this morning Judge McConnell began charging the jury and the case was expected to go to the jury by noon.

AMERICA'S IMMORTALS

THOMAS D. AMORY.

Lieutenant Amory, 26th Infantry.

Lieutenant Amory (deceased) was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for conspicuous gallantry in action near Verdun, France, October 2, 1918. Lieutenant Amory was detailed to lead a patrol on a hazardous and important mission of locating the main defense line of the enemy. Fighting his way under their heavy artillery and machine gun fire, and with no assistance from our batteries, he established his command two kilometers within the enemy territory. Although wounded and his small command badly cut to pieces, he refused to give up the ground he had taken, but by stubbornly resisting with his small detachment he finally succeeded in driving the enemy from this important position. His home was in Wilmington, Del.

Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Turner, sons Carl and Raymond, and Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Parks motored to Indiana this week and attended the fair.

EBERT TAKES VACATION—President Ebert is also much of a family man, as this photograph shows. It was taken recently at Spa Schwartzburg, where the head of the new German Republic snatched a few days of rest after the months of internal disorders and anxiety over the peace conference. At the left, with his wife, is Ebert and the two children near them are their own. At the right is Herr Nadolny, one of the cabinet officials, and his wife.

HUNTER'S LICENSE LAW CHANGES

Several changes were made in the Hunter's License law by the last Legislature and as these changes do not appear to be generally familiar to Clearfield county hunters. County Treasurer Kline is having more or less trouble while failure on the part of applicants to give correct post-office address, including street and number for City of DuBois residents and the number of R. D. routes when the applicant lives just outside of a town or the city is holding up the issuing of a number of licenses.

Some of the justices fail to include complete postoffice address in their applications made by them while the individual sending in his own generally fails to give all the information which the State Game Commission says must be given before a license can be legally issued.

For the information of everybody interested to lighten the burden of the county and state officials and to facilitate the securing of a license without those desiring same we give herewith a list of the requirements exacted by the Game Commission under the law before a license can be issued:

A special effort must be made to give all the data requested on the weekly report blank, namely:

1st. At least one full surname, or accepted abbreviation thereof, should be given for every licensee, and in no case should a license be issued or report made bearing only one initial for the surname of a licensee.

2nd. In giving the post office address we must ask that such post office address as would ordinarily be used in addressing the licensee be given in full giving the street and number in towns of any size, and where the licensee resides on an R. F. D., state the number of the R. F. D.

3rd. Under the heading of "Date of Issue" we must insist that the date be given in every case.

4th. Under the headings of "Color of Hair" and "Color of Eyes," we must have either the color written in full or such abbreviations as will be readily understood, and in no case will a single letter suffice as an abbreviation for the color of the hair or eyes.

Ditto marks may be used in any of the above matters where the data for two or more licensees is the same. Weekly reports must be forwarded to this office during the early part of the week following wherever it is physically possible to do so.

Send in your applications as early as possible and insure quick receipt of same before the rush comes.

Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Turner, sons Carl and Raymond, and Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Parks motored to Indiana this week and attended the fair.

WORKMEN'S BAKERY PEADY MONDAY TO PRODUCE BREAD

The Workman Bakery on Nichols street will fire up their ovens and produce the first baking of bread on Monday morning. It requires several bakings until an oven the size of the Workman oven is in shape for cakes and other pastries. It is the intention of the new bakers to put the finest of their wares on the market just as soon as it is possible.

Krupp, formerly of Pittsburgh, who is a baker of wide experience and will doubtless be tickling the palates of Clearfield folks are long.

BOARDMAN ATHLETIC CLUB WANTS ACTION

Boardman, Pa., Sept. 6, 1919. Editor Progress.—On behalf of the Boardman Athletic Club I hereby authorize you to issue a challenge to the Clearfield Baseball Club to play a game of baseball on the Clearfield grounds in the near future for $200 a side.

Clearfield may play any man that has appeared in the line-up of either the Clearfield or Curwensville teams this season.

We further stipulate that if Boardman wins then Clearfield is to pay us in addition to the side bet $100 for expenses. If Clearfield wins Boardman will make no claim for expenses or guarantee.

LEON KATZMAN,
Manager.

On receipt of Manager Katzman's challenge the Sporting Editor of The Progress got into communication with Manager McGowan of the Clearfield team. When told of the proposition Manager McGowan accepted the offer "hook, line and sinker." He started right out after the Boardman manager and when he found him plunked down the required $200. Katzman said he would not be in position to put the money up before Monday, but said he had posted a $10 forfeit with T. Reilly Lytle to bind the match. The two teams are to be selected from the following players.

Clearfield.—Fulmer, Lester, Bowes, Conklin, I. Robinson, B. McGowan, S. Robinson, Fauver, Lantz, D. Bailey, Heberling, Roseberry, and Leavish. Boardman.—J. Page, H. Patterson, W. Carlson, T. Davidson, A. Davidson, Mason, A. Williamson, Harrington, Melozier, W. Boag, D. McCracken.

NINE U. S. SOLDIERS EXECUTED IN FRANCE

(By United Press)
PARIS, Sept. 4.—(Delayed.)—Nine soldiers of the American expeditionary force, who were hanged and one was shot for criminal offenses during the war, it was revealed today at the investigation of the A. E. F. court martials by the congressional committee inquiring into war expenditures.

Two of the hangings were for murder. Seven men were hanged for rape, of whom six were negroes. There was a single execution for desertion.

Murder trials totaled 110, resulting in sixty-two convictions. One fifth of all the general court martials were officers, and the rest enlisted men and welfare workers. Most of the officers were charged with drunkenness and disorderly conduct. Convictions resulted in 67 per cent of the officers' cases which went to trial. Seventy-seven per cent of the men tried by general court martials were found guilty.

Only one conscientious objector was tried in the A. E. F.

The investigation failed to establish that officers had received more lenient treatment than enlisted men in the A. E. F. court martials.

MITCHELL CHASE CRITICALLY ILL

He is somewhat improved at this writing but his condition is alarming to his friends.

The editorial reprinted here from the Harrisburg Telegraph represents the view of the majority of Americans. The Telegraph is for the league of nations and has editorially supported the plan of the president. But the Telegraph as well as every body else knows that the people of the United States are not going to be frightened into accepting the plan.

FOOLISH TALK

Whether or not the United States shall adopt the proposed League of Nations plan is unquestionably an important question, but when Senator Hitchcock says its "rejection would be suicidal to the country" he talks foolishness.

The United States is going to continue right along doing business at the old stand, whether or not the treaty and the league are accepted or declined. We are the dominant nation of the world and we shall continue to be so long as we maintain our high ideals, work hard and exercise the common sense which has been our best trait. We are not going to commit suicide whatever we may do about the treaty; neither are we going to have anybody argue us into accepting it by such idle chatter, and Senator Hitchcock ought to be wise enough to know it.—Harrisburg Telegraph.

100 STUDENTS ARE ENROLLED AT THE COLLEGE OF MUSIC

The first week of the 1919-20 school year of the Susquehanna College of Music closed with this afternoon's session. The largest enrollment, over 100 students, in the history of the institution, greeted the faculty during the week and doubtless there will be more added to the student body as the fall progresses.

As an evidence of the wide-spread popularity of the school and its standing among students in the vicinity of this city there are students enrolled from Morrisdale, Houdale, Mahaffey, Kermoo, Berwindale, Curwensville, Woodland and Osceola.

Pupils may enroll at any time but in order that classes may be formed it is the desire of the management that those intending to start should do so at once, so that the class study may be kept uniform.—Adv.

"OUR PLEASANT SINS"

The Sory of A Dual Life.
The theatrical event of the coming season will be the engagement of BROADHURST'S sensational emotional drama "OUR PLEASANT SINS" which Henrietta Crossman made famous at the Belmont Theatre, New York. It is booked at the Driggs Theatre for Monday. The play deals with the dual life of a young attorney, who, safe in the love of his credulous wife, cheats her and deceives her until his widowed sister arrives on the scene, when the wife, although blind to his deceit and folly, is suddenly disillusioned.

In her grief and rage she is about to seek reprisal, when the widow comes to the rescue of both. The widow has a world of wisdom and is quick to act. She is loyal to her brother until satisfied that he has been guilty of clandestine meetings with another woman. She believes the best for both is a reunion, but finds it a very difficult task to convince the young wife to take her erring husband back. The great question arises, is a wife justified in making her life a sacrifice for an unworthy husband? The answer is to be found in "OUR PLEASANT SINS". A powerful play of real life with a New York cast direct from the Belmont theatre New York. A production beautiful and artistically staged.

Today's Political Review

Of all the county offices it is probable that less people throughout the county are brought into personal contact with the Prothonotary's office than the others except as they see the honored gentleman officiating as clerk of the court during trials or hear his resonant voice call out the names of the jurors. Then again, the Prothonotary does not disburse any funds or make any contracts involving the expenditure of funds and so he escapes much of the criticism that is ordinarily attached to a county office. About the only interest any voter can have in the contest for Prothonotary is a personal friendly interest in a certain candidate or, if one has much business with the court, he wants a clerk of the court who is efficient, accommodating, pleasant to meet. Being accommodating is probably the best asset one can have for this office. All fines and costs are paid through his office and naturally a man is not in the best of humor when he must pay fines and costs or pay a fee for having various instruments and papers filed and entered in civil suits. Of course, coupled with this accommodating manner, the incumbent must be capable of carrying on the work of the office in an efficient manner and seeing that the volumes of papers are properly recorded and indexed. In some cases it has been known that the Prothonotary has even kept members of the legal fraternity from making gross errors by keeping himself posted on the rules of the court and pointing out the errors of their ways.

Four aspirants to the office believe that they can fill the bill and are carrying on vigorous campaigns. They are Milford Bratton of Clearfield, Richard Burchill of Houdale, John E. Johnson of DuBois, and George Ralston of Clearfield.

Bratton, the first man on the ballot, has been a resident of Clearfield for several years, coming to this city from Glen Hope where he was born and raised and in which community he was a successful business man. On coming to Clearfield he became a member of the insurance firm of Smith and Bratton and his boundless energy and pleasing personality contributed largely to the success of that firm. Three or four years ago he became interested in a small extent in coal mining and has been giving a part of his time to that business. His political experience is broad. Eight years ago he was a candidate for Prothonotary but was defeated and John H. Moore was nominated and subsequently elected. In this campaign he also had as his opponents Richard Burchill and John E. Johnson. Four years ago he refused to make a fight for the nomination, conceding the right to a second term to John H. Moore. Burchill also dropped out of the race four years ago but Johnson stayed in. This year Bratton believes that he should be given consideration because of the good race he made eight years ago, coupled with the fact that he served a term as Republican County Chairman and it has been customary for the party to reward its chairman with some such consideration.

REGISTRAR FOR FALL ELECTION COMPLETE

The assessors of the county completed their registration for this year on Sept. 2d and 3d last and the lists of voters for the fall election are now being made up from this registration.

The registration of Sept. 2d and 3d had nothing to do with this fall's primary as primary registration was over before that time with the exception of the final day for personal registration in DuBois, our only third class city.

If Back Hurts Begin On Salts

Flush your Kidneys Occasionally if You Eat Meat Regularly

Man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders, come from sluggish kidneys. The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoon in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

Saving Coal Saves Money

There's a wealth of proof to show that your home may be thoroughly comfortable at a third or a half less fuel than you have been using. The Caloric Pipeless Furnace is a remarkable fuel conserver. Many say it saves half. Here is just one sample letter taken at random out of thousands which the manufacturers receive from pleased Caloric owners:

"I am heating very comfortably seven rooms and not using any more fuel than I did with a double heater, heating only two rooms.—S. P. SZRETT."

PIPELESS CALORIC FURNACE
The Original Patented Pipeless Furnace

Over fifty thousand homes, many of them in this state, have found this furnace the economical, common-sense method of keeping comfortable. They bought on a guarantee of real fuel saving and perfect satisfaction, and the Caloric made good.

One register delivers all the heat from the fuel directly into your living rooms and draws out the cold air, insuring an abundance of balmy, moist warmth right where you want it. The cellar is just right for the storage of perishable products.

The Caloric can be installed in a day. It is a triumph of engineering skill that embodies many patented features which have made it the leader and which are not found in imitations. Come in and see this wonderful furnace. We will tell you frankly whether it is adapted to your home. If we say it is, we will give you our personal guarantee that it will make good or we will take it out. Come in and talk it over.

should return to report that she had been attacked in these waters, suspiciously those of Ram Gulab Singh, was quite another!

And then to Wallen came a space of time that he could not estimate, each moment recording some wild, unrelenting, kaleidoscopic change in the scene around him. Again that terrific crash from a striking shell, and then a scream, unearthly, not human, from the very bowels of the ship—a tremor of the vessel from stem to stern, a groaning, screeching, wrenching of mangled machinery, a tottering and as though the engines had collapsed upon their bedplates, a cloud of steam volleying skyward from the engine room hatch, and there was no more vibration—and the Monleigh lay a helpless thing, with only a sullen movement now from the momentum of a moment gone.

He drew back against the captain's room.

They were rushing down from the bridge, Mott and Larsen, to hurl themselves down the forward ladders from the boat deck to the flush foredeck below, shouting a confusion of orders to the crew as they ran.

Laynton, still on the bridge, was alternately bawling into the engine room tube and juddering the engine telegraph hysterically backward and forward. A weird, uncanny chorus of exultant shrieks, as of devils in unholy revel, came from across the water, and the sound was close now.

Wallen swept his hands across his eyes. He could make out the other vessel plainly now, gliding like a shadow down upon them—like a shadow, save when the gun's flame burst through the blackness, angry red.

And now aft behind him showed another flame. A curious sight! The steam pouring in immense volumes from the engine room hatch was streaked, as it swirled upward, with darts of yellow and bright red. There was fire below!

A Chinaman, one of the coal passers, naked to the waist, blackened, burned, yelling in torment, demented, appeared suddenly upon the deck, ran by him and leaped headlong from the rail overboard.

The bridge, useless now for navigation, was deserted. Laynton rushed down the ladder and into his room; the quartermaster, who had been at the wheel, came tumbling after the captain, and, like the mates, swung the forward ladder to the foredeck.

The Monleigh rolled with a sudden, heavy lurch. Wallen moved instantly back along the deck. Was she sinking? He halted at the lounge room door for a final glance.

The steam, roaring from the engine room hatch, was streaked now with deeper yellow, deeper red. And now there came the crackle of small arms from the crew forward—the answer a demoniac mob-scream from close aboard, and, it seemed, a thousand tiny flashes as the fire was returned.

They were close alongside now—he heard the swish of the other's screw going astern to stop the way. They were preparing to board! Why! Why not stand off and sink the Monleigh?—the Monleigh was probably sinking now. Yes, he knew why. They were afraid that what Mott had suggested might be true—that he in the darkness might escape in a boat.

He laughed suddenly. What was it Gunga had said? "A fight, sahib, that I would to Allah I might see again before I die!" Well, Gunga had not prayed to Allah in vain. Gunga would have his fight. They were going to board. God, how they lined the decks and rails out there—they were in their hundreds!

It was light now, like the play of lightning with the volleying of the small-arms. Aye, Gunga would have his fight! He laughed again wildly—and then terror came.

It seemed to freeze his soul with horror, unrelenting him, unrelenting him for an instant. What of her? And then Wallen's face drew into set, rigid lines, and there came into his eyes a look that was not good to see—and he turned and dashed below.

"Open, Gunga, quick!" he shouted. And as the door swung back: "Miss MacKay—both of you—this way!"

They ran out to meet him, and he caught her suddenly, standing her as there came a violent shock—and with the shock a hideous, louder outburst of yelling.

It was Ram Gulab Singh alongside! Half carrying her, half guiding her, Wallen, with Gunga behind, gained the top of the companionway, ran out onto the deck through the starboard door of the lounge room and, protected on this side by the deckhouses, rushed forward toward the bridge.

It was a last stand; that was all—ultimately the same as though they had remained below, except that here they could die fighting and not as rats in a trap.

He and Gunga could hold the bridge ladders until the Monleigh went down, or until at least every other part of the ship was in the hands of Ram Gulab Singh; and the charthouse would serve as a protection for her until—until—his brain went sick again with fear at thought of her—and it did not seem to be his voice that was shouting so reassuringly over the horrible babel around him.

"Up you go, Miss MacKay! That's it! Splendid! Now into the chart-room!" He pushed her almost forcibly inside—and swung toward Gunga. "Gunga, take the starboard ladder—I'll take the port."

Around him was an inferno; screams, shrieks, yells and cries, the shrill hiss of escaping steam, the sharp crackle of a flame leaping upward through the engine room hatch, the crash and rattle of small-arm fire filled the air.

Below on the forward deck it was as though hell itself were loosed. The great looming shape of a vessel lay against the Monleigh's bow, from which, to join scores already there, white-clothed figures, like a horde of ghouls, poured onto the Monleigh's flush deck; and, as a fire-flame shot heavenward, illuminating the scene of daylight brightness, the naked steel of the ladders flickered in its downward sweep, and out of the features showed, and out of the features in a horribly incredible way the eyes glittered. And here and there upon the deck forms lay sprawled and prone as they had fallen.

Wallen ripped open a box of cartridges with his thumb nail, and let them tumble loose into his pocket, as he started over the weathercloth. What was left of the Monleigh's crew was already driven back on the ladders leading to the boat deck. Ram Gulab Singh was making short work of it—as he must!

With the Monleigh afire, even if the fire were still amiships, it was a precarious thing for that other vessel to lay there alongside! That was Laynton and two of the crew on the starboard ladder fighting like demons; and directly below him, on the lower port ladder, were Mott and Larsen and two others—no, there were only Larsen and two of the crew—Mott had pitched downward into the sweep of a kris, seeming most curiously to meet the glint of it in mid air.

Six left!

What was the matter below there now? What was that infuriated, triumphant yell of the Malays, louder than any than had gone before? They were swarming up both ladders! Laynton and Larsen from each side had given way—they were hidden under the bridge now, and he could not see, and—

Gunga's voice rang out: "Sahib, they come!"

In a flash Wallen swung about and dropped down full length on the bridge at the head of the port ladder, shouting to Gunga to do the same. He could understand now the sudden retreat from the low ladders.

The Malays had got off somehow and were now sweeping along the deck, screaming as they came, to take the Monleigh's men in the rear.

And now the light raged at the foot of his own ladder. Larsen and one man gained it—and Larsen toppled in a heap. The seaman, battling like a madman, made the first step of the ladder, the second, another—and then a form, leaping from the rack below, pulled the man backward and crashed down himself beside his victim, as Wallen's revolver streamed fire down the ladderway.

The last of the Monleigh's men was gone!

And then they came howling, screaming, mad with the blood-lust that was upon them, sweeping upward one after another—and one after the other went down before Wallen's fire, and the ladder steps grew cluttered, and Wallen laughed aloud. He could hold that ladder against a thousand of them—against all hell! A madness, a frenzy, was upon him. He laughed again. He could hear Gunga singing in a strange, croonlike way as he fought.

Another rush! He fired, fired once more—and then the hammer only clicked as he pulled the trigger. The magazine was empty!

He snatched at his pocket for cartridges, as the great form of a man, tall and gaunt, with distorted face, swept through the screaming mass below and sprang up the ladder.

There was no time to load—the man was almost at the top, with a dozen

"Ram Gulab Singh!" He Cried.

Sergeant Russell Mullen and wife are visiting in the home of the Sergeant's parents, Mr and Mrs. Frank Mullen, on North Walnut street.

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS CURWENSVILLE

Frank Whitaker, a son of Reuben Whitaker of Pike township, was in Clearfield one day this week and had his tonsils removed.

The immediate relatives and friends of Mrs. James Norris gave her a birthday party at her home last evening. A number of her immediate family were present. A most pleasant evening was spent by all present and at the close of the evening's sociabilities all departed for their homes wishing Mrs. Norris many happy days to come.

Amos Mattern and family returned home Tuesday after spending a two weeks outing in a visit to Mr. Mattern's old home and in Potter county.

Fred Kirk and wife are visiting in the home of Mrs. A. M. Kirk. He is the same jovial "Spud" as in days of yore.

David Read, of Glen Richey, is visiting his children on Irvin Hill this week.

Miss Jenette Patterson and Miss Marion Wels, of Clearfield, spent a portion of the week with Mrs. Walter Fullerton on Bloomington avenue.

Mrs. Joe Fullerton has returned home from a visit with relatives and friends at Bridgeport.

Messrs. Walter Norris and James Wise, of Pike township leased the fire clay rights on their farms last evening to the Mt. Union fire clay company. The transaction was made through that company's agent, Gilbert Wise.

So far this fall no one has heard the curfew bell ring as a warning to the youngsters to clear the streets and seek the protecting shelter of their homes.

Rev. Irvin P. Hawkins, whose illness has been mentioned from time to time in the Curwensville news letter, died at 3 o'clock A. M. yesterday, at his home on North Filbert street. Deceased was a native of North Carolina, and was united in marriage to a Virginia lady, who died at New Millport, 19 years ago last August. He entered the ministry in early manhood and for nine years preached in the south. Removing from his southern home he came to Confluence and Addison, Pa., remaining there for three years. His next charge was at Lilly, where he remained some five years. His next charge was at New Millport, this county, where he remained for five years and then accepted a call to Keewardin, residing there four years. Twelve years ago he came to Curwensville and became pastor of Grace Lutheran church and also of the church at Mahaffey, preaching alternately at each charge. He was aged 66 years. He is survived by three daughters and three sons, viz: Mrs. E. P. Gilliland, of La Junta, Cal., Miss Elizabeth and Marion at home, Paul and Glen residing in Cal., and Dr. D. B. Hawkins, who was in Texas, but arrived home the day before his father's death. Since first stricken on Easter Sunday, Rev. Hawkins preached but two sermons, one at Mahaffey and the other here. During his residence in Curwensville deceased made many warm friends, who deeply sympathize with the family in their bereavement. The funeral will be held on Sunday. Interment in the family plot at New Millport.

Sergeant Russell Mullen and wife are visiting in the home of the Sergeant's parents, Mr and Mrs. Frank Mullen, on North Walnut street.

followers behind him. Wallen leaped to his feet and with clubbed revolver lunged forward.

And then suddenly the great white beam of a searchlight from seaward played for an instant over the bridge—and in the white light Wallen looked into the eyes of Ram Gulab Singh—and knew it was Ram Gulab Singh, because the hand that clutched at the ladder's side rope was fingerless, save for the forefinger.

"Ram Gulab Singh!" he cried, and struck with all his might—and missed. The whirr of the other's kris sang in his ear as he flung himself sideways to avoid the blow.

"You have your father's face, you rat!" the man shrieked, and lifted the blade to swing again.

The white light was gone—searching along the length of the ship. Again Wallen struck in the light of the flames now that were bursting, angry, venomous, with a roar and hiss, from the engine-room hatch, and this time the other reeled back as the blow went home.

But the next instant the man behind Ram Gulab Singh—on the ladder—reached forward between his leader's legs and jerked Wallen's feet from beneath him. There was a scream of triumph from Ram Gulab Singh; and as Wallen, losing his balance, pitched forward, he caught the flash of the whirling kris coming down upon him.

And then, in the fraction of a second that followed, even as he felt the blade, stimulated a thousandfold, absorbing details, registered upon his consciousness.

The blade, within an inch of his head, seemed to fly off into the air as though torn from the other's hands; a revolver roared behind him, the hot breath of it on his face, and Ram Gulab Singh flung up his hands; his voice was calling his name again and again—and then he had smashed his fists full into Ram Gulab Singh.

Mechanically his arms locked around the other; and hurtling downward over the sprawled bodies on the ladder-steps, howling those behind over like ninepins, Wallen spun, twisting and turning in the air, a dead man clutched in his embrace, and crashed upon the deck, and his arms relaxed, and he lay still.

When he opened his eyes he was in Gunga's arms, and Helen MacKay was binding something about his head; and there was a strange stillness about him—strange because the roar of the flames was stillness where it seemed there should be shouts and cries and demagogical screams and the clash of arms and the shrieks of dying men.

He staggered up to his feet. Sailors in naval uniform were running about the decks, and a romping officer was peering into his face. Wallen tried to place the other, and failed at first, because his head was swimming so dizzily; and then he remembered that it was Lieutenant Damon, of the gunboat York, who had crossed with him once in the Tokomaru.

"A narrow squeak, old chap!" Damon was saying, with a grin on Wallen's hand. "The old York's chasing those devils out there now—hear the guns! We got the whole story from Miss MacKay two days ago. The commander sent me off with a couple of boats' crews in the hope that we'd find some of you alive; and he sent me because I'd know you, Wallen, my boy—if you were really Wallen."

"I—I don't understand," said Wallen weakly.

"No—I dare say not!" Damon laughed cheerily. "And there isn't much time now to explain; we've got to take to the boat. But, in a word, Miss MacKay here wirelessly your servant's story to Singapore and asked for help for herself, giving a nautical position that she said she had succeeded in getting from the second officer. You had a day's start of us, but you must have been averaging over twelve knots, or we'd have come up sooner."

"They didn't know what to make of that story of Drink-House Sam's murder as your servant told it, but they rounded up the Chinese and Malays that he accused; and two of them confessed, implicating the others. That clears you, old man. Here—steady! Don't wobble like that! I'll get a couple of my men to carry you to the boat." He turned away, hurrying along the deck.

Wallen's hand, raised to sweep across his eyes, touched the hand that, nor so deftly now, a little tremblingly now, was still making a pretense at knotting the bandage.

"You—you sent—the story—my story," he said eagerly. "Then—you believed me all the time!"

"She shook her head. 'I—I wanted to believe—oh, I wanted to,' she said wistfully. 'Only—I—'"

And then her head bent lower, very close to his, and her cheek brushed his—and it was wet with tears.

"Helen!" he whispered.

"Come on!" called Damon, returning. "We'll have to tumble into the boat. The commander said I was to take you ashore and wait for the York to get back; but there's a fellow out there—a Scotsman—who's come out from shore in a big boat that I passed as we came aboard, and that'll be better than a three-mile pull."

"He can't come alongside, of course—too risky a maneuver with the head-way the fire's made off—but he's waiting for us. In the ward I had with him when I told him to stand by, he seemed to know you, Wallen."

And then, as though to corroborate Damon's words, across the water came a hail in a strong, big voice.

"Abroad there! Wallen! 'Tis Mac-Knight o' Arru, Wallen! Men, is it

COLLEGE NIGHT AT TRINITY

METHODIST CHURCH

College night has now come to be a regular feature of the early September meetings in Trinity church, and will be observed Sunday night with a splendid program including special music by the choir and a male quartet and an address by A. D. Bigley, president of the Clearfield Board of Education who is still close enough to his college days at Princeton university to speak intimately on the subject of "The Opportunities of College Life."

The names of eighteen young people who are going away to school will appear on the church calendar and the church will be decorated with college pennants, ferns and flowers.

Clearfield never loses an opportunity to show its interest in Christian education and there will doubtless be a large congregation at Trinity Methodist church tomorrow evening to pay a tribute to the young people who purpose to secure the best training for useful careers.

PRESBYTERIANS

Returning last night from my vacation find both the church and the chapel in the hands of the decorators and carpenters, and that it is impossible to hold any service tomorrow in either church or chapel. The Sabbath school, through the courtesy of the Lutheran church, will meet in the Lutheran Sabbath school room at the regular hour of service, 11:45. There will be no preaching service tomorrow. The chapel will in all probability be ready for the coming Sabbath. Notice will appear in the papers as early next week as possible regarding the services. Make the most of the Sabbath school service tomorrow, and be present.

"LEAGUE OPPONENTS' WITH JAUNDICED EYES WILL BE HANGED ON GIBBETS"

WILSON TELLS KANSAS CITY PEOPLE IN SPEECH TEEMING WITH EMOTION

CONDEMNATION OF OPPONENTS IS IN-CREASING AS PRESIDENT GETS
NEARER TO WESTERN COUNTRY

WILL SPEAK AT OMAHA TONIGHT

CONVENTION HALL, KANSAS CITY, Sept. 6—"Treaty opponents who view the peace treaty and league of nations with jaundiced eyes; who are against it because they have private political interests will at least be gibbeted and they will regret that the gibbet will be so high." This is what President Wilson told his Kansas City audience here this morning. He reiterated that league opponents must put up or shut up and declared that a putting down of the present plan with putting up anything in its stead was pure "boishevism." Further he said that he respected the man who honestly but ignorantly opposed the league but that he had nothing but contempt for the man who opposed it for selfish interests.

By HUGH BAILEE
United Press Correspondent

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—Constituents of Senator Reed, one of the principal opponents of the peace treaty and league of nations are to hear President Wilson's arguments for the league today. Kansas City is Senator Reed's home town.

The President apparently is making an effort to strip the treaty of all its technicality and obscurity and present it as a "human" document. The keynote of his addresses have been that the nation is approaching a new era in its international relations and that if the verdict is against the treaty the result will strike to the very homes of the people. Failure of the treaty, he tells the audiences, will make of America a militarist power facing disappointed nations and subject to the hate and revenge of her old time enemies.

With every speech his criticism and ridicule of United States senators is growing in acerbity and by the time he reaches the Pacific coast it is hard to tell by what name he will call them. The old sedate dignified school master is gone. In his stead there appears before the western audiences a man with a vision of the future, a firm belief in the right of the course he has taken and a growing dislike for those who do not agree with him and are in a position to hold up his will.

By L. C. MARTIN

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 6—With Senate opponents of the peace treaty and league of nations planning a tour of the country over which President Wilson is now speaking they are also counting noses to determine their voting strength. A leading Democratic senator today declared that twenty Democrats will vote for reservations to the treaty while twenty-seven will vote for unqualified ratification.

Every utterance of the President while on his tour tends to solidify the opposition to the league and his constant references to senators as men who do not know their business; do not know their constituents and men who do not understand the treaty is forcing them to take counter action in words even stronger than those of the President. Yesterday Senator Sherman characterized the President as a "demagogue" when he was shown the text of the President's address in which Wilson declared that several plans under the peace treaty would be carried out whether the peace treaty was signed or not. This involved the meeting in American soil of an international committee under the league plan.

COMPERS DECLINES TO MAKE PUBLIC REPLY RECEIVED FROM PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6—Samuel Compers today received a reply from President Wilson to his wife asking that the President use his influence to get a conference for the steel workers committee with Chairman Gary of the U. S. Steel corporation. Compers declined to make known the contents of the reply saying that it would be indecible to do so when the President has not seen fit to make it public. The reply makes known the course the President will pursue. Next Tuesday the twenty-four presidents of steel workers unions are to meet here and it is expected that the reply will be read to them at that time.

SURVEYOR MANAGER ANSWERS SPECTATOR

Surveyor, Pa. Sept. 4, 1919
Editor Clearfield Progress:

I noticed in your issue of September 2nd a statement signed "spectator," which attempted to make explanation of the circumstances leading up to the forfeiting of a game to Karthaus by the Surveyor team, which refused to stand for the open highway robbery of the Karthaus umpire and people.

The matter concerning "imported players" has nothing to do with the case whatever as both sides got the best they could and while the Karthaus scribe says Long and Montgomery were from Bellefonte, Mr. Long, who is a gentleman, told me himself he was from the Toronto, Canada, International League team.

We will endeavor to give the facts as we saw them and let the public decide who showed the yellow streak.

The trouble occurred in the sixth inning. The score stood 1 to 0 when Surveyor came to bat. We had two men out and the bases filled. Montgomery was in the box winding up to deliver the ball to the batter, who already had one strike. The runner on third saw a chance to steal home and broke for the plate. The pitcher failed to note the runner speeding for home and delivered the ball as he thought to the batter. Catcher Rees left his position back of the bat and jumping in front of the plate intercepted the throw and put the ball on the runner as he slid in to home.

Umpire Lewis mistakenly called the runner out. As manager of the Surveyor team I protested against the decision which was palpably wrong and in violation of the rules and asked Lewis to reverse his ruling and while he appeared willing to do so Potter and the other Karthaus people would not allow him to do so. Montgomery told Lewis and Potter that the decision was wrong but Jay said "to hell with them; we won't give it to them, right or wrong." Seeing there was no chance for a square deal from that crowd where the manager was unfair and the umpire had to obey his orders, we refused to be robbed and I called the team from the field.

Then to get even and make it a real outcry Manager Potter skinned us out of the $10 guarantee promised us for coming down to play.

We make reply to "Big Noise" Schnarrs ("Spectator") because we wish to warn all other teams against going to Karthaus if they want a square deal. Also if you are going to deal with these tin horn sports get your guarantee first, because if they can beat you out of it by any pretext they sure will do it.

Manager Potter and his gang don't care a bit more for a dollar than a farmer does for one of his eyes.

Kindly give this space as I want to nail the fairy tale "Big Noise" had you print.

Antonio Aveni, who before he war conducted a shoe repairing shop in the Staver block on Third street, has returned to Clearfield. He left here in October, 1917 and before going was forced to dispose of a thriving business. He was a real patriotic sacrifice and should be heart in business again we bespeak for him a liberal share of patronage. While "over there" he got a furlough and visited his wife and child in Italy. Mr. Aveni expects to bring his family to the United States in the near future.

FIRE CHIEF HOPFER RESIGNS POSITION

The regular meeting of the Clearfield Fire Department was held in the Elk Hose company's parlor last evening and was largely attended by the firemen of the four companies making up the department.

On account of his having moved out of the borough Fire Chief Hopfer presented his resignation, which was accepted by the department with regret. First Assistant Ira Jay, of the Second Ward company was advanced to Chief to fill out the unexpired term of ex-chief Hopfer.

Notice was received from a U. S. army disbursing officer that the ten army gas masks ordered for the department had been shipped and should be here any day now.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Whereas, Ed. B. Case, member of the Third Ward Hose Co., and for several years past the careful and efficient treasurer of the Clearfield Fire Department, is a candidate for re-election to the office of Register and Recorder of Clearfield county at the county September primary election. Bro. Case has long been an active fireman and one of the most energetic, hardworking members in this department. In view of the fact that war conditions greatly added to the work of the Register & Recorder's office during the term now drawing to a close without adequate compensation therefor we believe Bro. Case to be entitled to another term under normal conditions and also that his efficient conduct of the office should commend him to the voters of the county. Therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Clearfield Fire Department unanimously endorse the candidacy of Ed. B. Case for the office of Register and Recorder of Clearfield county and urge all firemen and citizens generally who believe in rewarding faithful, efficient public service to rally to his support and assist him in securing re-nomination and re-election to this office.

A resolution endorsing the candidacy of M. M. Overly of Elk Hose company for the nomination for county treasurer was also unanimously adopted.

Delegate Martin Seffend made his report on the District Convention at Houzdale, after which the meeting adjourned. The next meeting of the department will be held at the Third Ward Hose House Friday October 3d.

AMERICA'S IMMORTALS

THOMAS D. AMORY.

Lieutenant Amory, 26th Infantry.

Lieutenant Amory (deceased) was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for conspicuous gallantry in action near Verdun, France, October 2, 1918.

Lieutenant Amory was detailed to lead a patrol on a hazardous and important mission of locating the main defense line of the enemy.

Fighting his way under their heavy artillery and machine gun fire, and with no assistance from our batteries, he established his command two kilometers within the enemy territory.

Although wounded and his small command badly cut to pieces, he refused to give up the ground he had taken, but by stubbornly resisting with his small detachment he finally succeeded in driving the enemy from this important position.

His home was in Wilmington, Del.

HUNTER'S LICENSE LAW CHANGES

Several changes were made in the Hunter's License law by the last Legislature and as these changes do not appear to be generally familiar to Clearfield county hunters. County Treasurer Kline is having more or less trouble while failure on the part of applicants to give correct post-office address, including street and number for City of DuBois residents and the number of R. D. routes when the applicant lives just outside of a town or the city is holding up the issuing of a number of licenses.

Some of the justices fail to include complete postoffice address in their applications made by them while the individual sending in his own generally fails to give all the information which the State Game Commission says must be given before a license can be legally issued.

For the information of everybody interested to lighten the burden of the county and state officials and to facilitate the securing of a license without those desiring same we give herewith a list of the requirements exacted by the Game Commission under the law before a license can be issued:

A special effort must be made to give all the data requested on the weekly report blank, namely:

1st. At least one full surname, or accepted abbreviation thereof, should be given for every licensee, and in no case should a license be issued or report made bearing only one initial for the surname of a licensee.

2nd. In giving the post office address we must ask that such post office address as would ordinarily be used in addressing the licensee be given in full giving the street and number in towns of any size, and where the licensee resides on an R. F. D., state the number of the R. F. D.

3rd. Under the heading of "Date of Issue" we must insist that the date be given in every case.

4th. Under the headings of "Color of Hair" and "Color of Eyes," we must have either the color written in full or such abbreviations as will be readily understood, and in no case will a single letter suffice as an abbreviation for the color of the hair or eyes.

Ditto marks may be used in any of the above matters where the data for two or more licensees is the same. Weekly reports must be forwarded to this office during the early part of the week following wherever it is physically possible to do so.

Send in your applications as early as possible and insure quick receipt of same before the rush comes.

Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Turner, sons Carl and Raymond, and Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Parks motored to Indiana this week and attended the fair.

BOARDMAN ATHLETIC CLUB WANTS ACTION

Boardman, Pa., Sept. 6, 1919. Editor Progress.—On behalf of the Boardman Athletic Club I hereby authorize you to issue a challenge to the Clearfield Baseball Club to play a game of baseball on the Clearfield grounds in the near future for $200 a side.

Clearfield may play any man that has appeared in the line-up of either the Clearfield or Curveville teams this season.

We further stipulate that if Boardman wins then Clearfield is to pay us in addition to the side bet $100 for expenses. If Clearfield wins Boardman will make no claim for expenses or guarantee.

LEON KATZMAN,
Manager.

On receipt of Manager Katzman's challenge the Sporting Editor of The Progress got into communication with Manager McGowan of the Clearfield team. When told of the proposition Manager McGowan accepted the offer "hook, line and sinker." He started right out after the Boardman manager and when he found him plunked down the required $200. Katzman said he would not be in position to put the money up before Monday, but said he had posted a $10 forfeit with T. Reilly Lytle to bind the match.

The two teams are to be selected from the following players.

Clearfield.—Fulmer, Lester, Bowes, Conklin, I. Robinson, B. McGowan, S. Robinson, Fauver, Lantz, D. Bailey, Heberling, Roseberry, and Leashish.

Boardman.—J. Page, H. Patterson, W. Carlson, T. Davidson, A. Davidson, Mason, A. Williamson, Harrington, Melozier, W. Boag, D. McCracken.

NINE U. S. SOLDIERS EXECUTED IN FRANCE

(By United Press)
PARIS, Sept. 4.—(Delayed.)—Nine soldiers of the American expeditionary force, who were hanged and one was shot for criminal offenses during the war, it was revealed today at the investigation of the A. E. F. court martials by the congressional committee inquiring into war expenditures.

Two of the hangings were for murder. Seven men were hanged for rape, of whom six were negroes. There was a single execution for desertion.

Murder trials totaled 110, resulting in sixty-two convictions. One fifth of all the general court martials were officers, and the rest enlisted men and welfare workers. Most of the officers were charged with drunkenness and disorderly conduct. Convictions resulted in 67 per cent of the officers' cases which went to trial. Seventy-seven per cent of the men tried by general court martials were found guilty.

Only one conscientious objector was tried in the A. E. F.

The investigation failed to establish that officers had received more lenient treatment than enlisted men in the A. E. F. court martials.

MITCHELL CHASE CRITICALLY ILL

He is somewhat improved at this writing but his condition is alarming to his friends.

The editorial reprinted here from the Harrisburg Telegraph represents the view of the majority of Americans. The Telegraph is for the league of nations and has editorially supported the plan of the president. But the Telegraph as well as every body else knows that the people of the United States are not going to be frightened into accepting the plan.

FOOLISH TALK

Whether or not the United States shall adopt the proposed League of Nations plan is unquestionably an important question, but when Senator Hitchcock says its "rejection would be suicidal to the country" he talks foolishness.

The United States is going to continue right along doing business at the old stand, whether or not the treaty and the league are accepted or declined. We are the dominant nation of the world and we shall continue to be so long as we maintain our high ideals, work hard and exercise the common sense which has been our best trait. We are not going to commit suicide whatever we may do about the treaty; neither are we going to have anybody argue us into accepting it by such idle chatter, and Senator Hitchcock ought to be wise enough to know it.—Harrisburg Telegraph.

100 STUDENTS ARE ENROLLED AT THE COLLEGE OF MUSIC

The first week of the 1919-20 school year of the Susquehanna College of Music closed with this afternoon's session. The largest enrollment, over 100 students, in the history of the institution, greeted the faculty during the week and doubtless there will be more added to the student body as the fall progresses.

As an evidence of the wide-spread popularity of the school and its standing among students in the vicinity of this city there are students enrolled from Morrisdale, Houdale, Mahaffey, Kermoo, Berwindale, Curwensville, Woodland and Osceola.

Pupils may enroll at any time but in order that classes may be formed it is the desire of the management that those intending to start should do so at once, so that the class study may be kept uniform.—Adv.

"OUR PLEASANT SINS"

The Story of A Dual Life.
The theatrical event of the coming season will be the engagement of BROADHURST'S sensational emotional drama "OUR PLEASANT SINS" which Henrietta Crossman made famous at the Belmont Theatre, New York. It is booked at the Driggs Theatre for Monday. The play deals with the dual life of a young attorney, who, safe in the love of his credulous wife, cheats her and deceives her until his widowed sister arrives on the scene, when the wife, although blind to his deceit and folly, is suddenly disillusioned.

In her grief and rage she is about to seek reprisal, when the widow comes to the rescue of both. The widow has a world of wisdom and is quick to act. She is loyal to her brother until satisfied that he has been guilty of clandestine meetings with another woman. She believes the best for both is a reunion, but finds it a very difficult task to convince the young wife to take her erring husband back. The great question arises, is a wife justified in making her life a sacrifice for an unworthy husband? The answer is to be found in "OUR PLEASANT SINS". A powerful play of real life with a New York cast direct from the Belmont theatre New York. A production beautiful and artistically staged.

Today's Political Review

Of all the county offices it is probable that less people throughout the county are brought into personal contact with the Prothonotary's office than the others except as they see the honored gentleman officiating as clerk of the court during trials or hear his resonant voice call out the names of the jurors. Then again, the Prothonotary does not disburse any funds or make any contracts involving the expenditure of funds and so he escapes much of the criticism that is ordinarily attached to a county office. About the only interest any voter can have in the contest for Prothonotary is a personal friendly interest in a certain candidate or, if one has much business with the court, he wants a clerk of the court who is efficient, accommodating, pleasant to meet. Being accommodating is probably the best asset one can have for this office. All fines and costs are paid through his office and naturally a man is not in the best of humor when he must pay fines and costs or pay a fee for having various instruments and papers filed and entered in civil suits. Of course, coupled with this accommodating manner, the incumbent must be capable of carrying on the work of the office in an efficient manner and seeing that the volumes of papers are properly recorded and indexed. In some cases it has been known that the Prothonotary has even kept members of the legal fraternity from making gross errors by keeping himself posted on the rules of the court and pointing out the errors of their ways.

Four aspirants to the office believe that they can fill the bill and are carrying on vigorous campaigns. They are Milford Bratton of Clearfield, Richard Burchill of Houdale, John E. Johnson of DuBois, and George Ralston of Clearfield.

Bratton, the first man on the ballot, has been a resident of Clearfield for several years, coming to this city from Glen Hope where he was born and raised and in which community he was a successful business man. On coming to Clearfield he became a member of the insurance firm of Smith and Bratton and his boundless energy and pleasing personality contributed largely to the success of that firm. Three or four years ago he became interested in a small extent in coal mining and has been giving a part of his time to that business. His political experience is broad. Eight years ago he was a candidate for Prothonotary but was defeated and John H. Moore was nominated and subsequently elected. In this campaign he also had as his opponents Richard Burchill and John E. Johnson. Four years ago he refused to make a fight for the nomination, conceding the right to a second term to John H. Moore. Burchill also dropped out of the race four years ago but Johnson stayed in. This year Bratton believes that he should be given consideration because of the good race he made eight years ago, coupled with the fact that he served a term as Republican County Chairman and it has been customary for the party to reward its chairman with some such consideration.

REGISTRAR FOR FALL ELECTION COMPLETE

The assessors of the county completed their registration for this year on Sept. 2d and 3d last and the lists of voters for the fall election are now being made up from this registration.

The registration of Sept. 2d and 3d had nothing to do with this fall's primary as primary registration was over before that time with the exception of the final day for personal registration in DuBois, our only third class city.

If Back Hurts Begin On Salts

Flush your Kidneys Occasionally if You Eat Meat Regularly

Man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders, come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoon in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

Why We Welcome Small Accounts

Many people believe that a bank does not want small accounts.

In such accounts, however, the profits are mutual.

The bank that encourages small accounts often sees them grow into large ones.

The possession of a bank account inspires the depositor to saving habits and teaches him to be business-like.

We are glad to serve the small depositor, believing his connection with the bank will benefit both him and ourselves.

CHAPTER II—Wallen's boat drifts to the island of Atro and a Scottish trader there, MacKnight, cares for him. Learning that a ship is in port on the other side of the island, twenty miles away, Wallen, though unfit for the task, determines to reach it. He was not but faintly exhausted on the trail. There he is found by a man and woman who are from the ship he was trying to reach. First, a male, and Helen MacKay, a passenger. They convey him to the vessel.

CHAPTER III—The ship proves to be a small tramp steamer, the Monleigh, Capt. Laynton. Laynton tells Wallen the vessel had been chartered by Wallen's father to find his son. Wallen's father had been in grave danger because of a long-standing feud between the elder Wallen and a notorious pirate, Ram Gulab Singh. Laynton also informs him of the death of his father, explaining that the fatality was believed to be an accident. Wallen instantly associates his father's death with the Chhannan's confession on the Upolo. He takes over the charter of the vessel.

CHAPTER IV—Helen MacKay explains that she is on a visit to an aunt in Suva. Wallen agrees to take her there, just touching at Singapore, where he is determined to fathom the mystery of his father's death. While looking over his father's papers, which Laynton had turned over to him, Wallen is startled by the thrusting of a piece of paper beneath his cabin door. On the paper is traced a human hand from which all but the forefinger had been hacked away. He recognizes it as of sinister import, connected with the death of his father.

CHAPTER V—At Singapore Wallen leaves the ship, alone, and visits Drink-House Sam's bar-room, determined to force from him an elucidation of the mystery. Announcing himself as Stacey Wallen, Sam denounces him as a liar and the crowd in the bar-room attacks him. Wallen escapes, but waits outside the chance, having made up his mind to have an interview alone with Sam. Entering the house he finds Drink-House Sam murdered and at the same time encounters his father's old servant, Gunga.

CHAPTER VI—Gunga urges Wallen to return at once to the Monleigh and on the way tells him he is not Drink-House Sam's murderer, although he had broken into the house to kill him. Gunga also tells Wallen the story of the enmity existing between his father and Gulab Singh, an enmity caused by the elder Wallen's efforts to put an end to Gulab Singh's pirate career.

CHAPTER VII—Next morning Laynton puts Wallen under arrest for the murder of Drink-House Sam, but tells him he will not deliver him to the authorities at Singapore. An emissary of Gulab Singh, on the Monleigh, had convinced Laynton that the vessel had been chartered by the elder Wallen to search for treasure, the whereabouts of which Laynton believes Wallen is aware of. Laynton denounces Wallen as an impostor, calling his attention to the entry on the log of the Upolo, where Wallen in his delirium had written the announcement of his death. Wallen vainly tries to explain, telling the whole facts concerning Gulab Singh's schemes to have him assassinated, and also his belief that the pirate is desirous of seizing the vessel. Laynton laughs at him and the ship sets out on a course that takes her directly to Ram Gulab Singh's stronghold, where they will be found. He refuses to put Miss MacKay ashore.

CHAPTER VIII—Knowing the whole party is going to certain death, Wallen flings with Gunga to save himself and Gunga seizes two revolvers from Laynton's cabin. With Helen, they barricade themselves in the saloon. While Wallen and Laynton are parleying, Ram Gulab Singh attacks.

CHAPTER IX.

The Man With One Finger.

Wallen walked quietly across the saloon to his own cabin. A strange, unnatural calm seemed to have fallen upon him with Gunga's words. Too late!

He could not in justice reproach himself. There had been only one chance and he had taken it—MacKnight's. Even if he had defied Laynton and his sordid crew hours earlier, the result would have been the same—it would have brought neither the land nor MacKnight's sooner.

It was only that Ram Gulab Singh had come first.

He took his reserve supply of ammunition from his hiding place, stowed half the boxes away in his pocket, and with the balance of the cartridges in his hand, returned to the saloon and gave them to Gunga, motioning the other to remove the barricade.

"What are you going to do?" She had come out from her stateroom and was standing now, a straight, resolute little figure, with eyes that were very wide as they fixed on him.

The electric bulb in the saloon dimmed down and went out. The boom of the heavy gun came across the water again, and unconsciously for a tense instant Wallen waited, expectant of the shock if the shell should find its mark. It missed.

"I'm going on deck," he answered, quietly. "There'll be too busy to notice me, and besides it's dark. Gunga will stay here and replace the barricade after I go out. We've got to know what's going on. Miss MacKay. The ship has been struck once, though not fatally, I think; but down here is no place to be caught in if another shot prove more successful. I will be back presently."

Without giving her a chance to reply he slipped through the door as Gunga opened it and out into the alleyway. It was black, empty, deserted, as he had expected.

He made his way up the companionway to the little lounge room and halted in the port doorway, looking out.

He could see nothing at first. It was very dark—not a light showed on the Monleigh. In that respect Laynton, taught no doubt by his experiences in the discreditable and varied trades he had boasted was the Monleigh's business, had been prompt to meet emergencies.

And then gradually, discernible only to a sailor's eye, like a dark blotch on the water, Wallen made out another steamer almost abreast. An instant later, as though in grim endorsement of his vision, from the blotch there leaped a great red flame, came the heavy, resonant roar of the gun's report, and overhead a shell whistled continuously by.

About a mile Wallen now placed the distance between the two vessels, though as to the size of the other he could form no estimate. But did it matter?

She was well armed at all events; and it was Ram Gulab Singh, once a government official, always a robber and a murderer—the man who had brought his mother to her death, his father to his death, and now it was his own turn!

But he knew neither excitement nor dismay. He was only conscious of something smoldering dully within him, and that was because Helen MacKay was here. He shook his head a little. Helen MacKay, of course, would never fall into Ram Gulab Singh's hands—alive.

On the bridge he could hear Laynton calling down the engine room tube, frantically imploring the engineer for speed; and then Laynton's voice was drowned out by a din from forward by the crew.

Wallen, hugging the shadows of the deckhouses, moved forward to a position under the bridge.

Mott was talking excitedly overhead.

"She's coming up hand over hand, I tell you. If that fellow Wallen's story is straight after all—and I guess there ain't much doubt of it now—we haven't a hope if that chap out there gets aboard us, providing he don't sink us first. I say go full astern until we get away off her, and then take to the boats. We could give him the ship in the dark if we don't wait till he gets too near to see what we're about, and—"

Another voice cut in, Larsen's, as hurrying from aft he ran up the starboard ladder to the bridge.

"Help yourself, Mott," he invited sarcastically. "One boat's in splinters and the other's carried away; the deck aft is a wreck from that shell that struck us."

"Light that Morse lamp," ordered Laynton abruptly.

"Yes, and give him our position," sneered Mott.

"He's got it fast enough now," growled Laynton. "But we'll give him something else. You there, Larsen, light it, d'ye hear? And Morse, tell him that if it's that swine that's masquerading as Wallen he wants, we'll turn him over and—my God!—with a rip and crash, staggering the ship, a shot tore the wireless house to matchwood."

"Quick!" yelled Laynton. "Tell him! Tell him, d'ye hear—tell him! He'll have us at the bottom in another five minutes!"

A strange, awed silence held for an instant following the shot; and now, over his head, Wallen could distinctly hear the clicking of the Morse set.

He strained his eyes seaward, watching for an answering signal, and after a moment it came—but not in Morse. It was the belching flare of the gun again, and again the rend and smash of the projectile as it tore into the Monleigh's hull.

Made His Way Up the Companionway.

There was no doubt about the range now, nor the honor of Ram Gulab Singh's answer. It was as Gunga had said—the principle that dead men tell no tales. Ram Gulab Singh's theories, from Ram Gulab Singh's standpoint, were faultless—that a ship might disappear off the face of the earth and be never heard of again was one thing, but that she or anyone on board her

You can learn a lot from ADVERTISING

The main thing an advertiser wants to do is to tell you plainly just how and why his goods are worthy of your consideration. You can learn a great deal from that alone, because many things you see advertised are the things you buy and use in your regular daily life. By reading the advertisements, you can learn the names and read descriptions of the things that are best and most satisfactory.

But advertising teaches even more than that. All advertisers try to make their advertisements themselves valuable to you.

A good many people have learned a whole lot about good music, good books, good food, good clothes, ways to keep healthy, ways to live comfortably, ways to keep the house and grounds looking well—they have learned all these things and many other things just by reading advertisements.

Read the advertisements right along, and you will learn a great deal that will be helpful and valuable to you as you go through life.

Comb Sage Tea Into Gray Hair

Darkens Beautifully and Restores Its Natural Color and Lustre at Once

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair, beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients a large bottle, at little cost, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur compound," thus avoiding a lot of fuss.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.

The IMPOSTOR

should return to report that she had been attacked in these waters, suspiciously those of Ram Gulab Singh, was quite another!

And then to Wallen came a space of time that he could not estimate, each moment recording some wild, unrelenting, kaleidoscopic change in the scene around him. Again that terrific crash from a striking shell, and then a scream, unearthly, not human, from the very bowels of the ship—a tremor of the vessel from stem to stern, a groaning, screeching, wrenching of mangled machinery, a tottering and as though the engines had collapsed upon their bedplates, a cloud of steam volleying skyward from the engine room hatch, and there was no more vibration—and the Monleigh lay a helpless thing, with only a sullen movement now from the momentum of a moment gone.

He drew back against the captain's room.

They were rushing down from the bridge, Mott and Larsen, to hurl themselves down the forward ladders from the boat deck to the flush foredeck below, shouting a confusion of orders to the crew as they ran.

Layton, still on the bridge, was alternately bawling into the engine room tube and juddering the engine telegraph hysterically backward and forward. A weird, uncanny chorus of exultant shrieks, as of devils in unholy revel, came from across the water, and the sound was close now.

Wallen swept his hands across his eyes. He could make out the other vessel plainly now, gliding like a shadow down upon them—like a shadow, save when the gun's flame burst through the blackness, angry red.

And now aft behind him showed another flame. A curious sight! The steam pouring in immense volumes from the engine room hatch was streaked, as it swirled upward, with darts of yellow and bright red. There was fire below!

A Chinaman, one of the coal passers, naked to the waist, blackened, burned, yelling in torment, demented, appeared suddenly upon the deck, ran by him and leaped headlong from the rail overboard.

The bridge, useless now for navigation, was deserted. Layton rushed down the ladder and into his room; the quartermaster, who had been at the wheel, came tumbling after the captain, and, like the mates, swung the forward ladder to the foredeck.

The Monleigh rolled with a sudden, heavy lurch. Wallen moved instantly back along the deck. Was she sinking? He halted at the lounge room door for a final glance.

The steam, roaring from the engine room hatch, was streaked now with deeper yellow, deeper red. And now there came the crackle of small arms from the crew forward—the answer a demoniac mob-scream from close aboard, and, it seemed, a thousand tiny flashes as the fire was returned.

They were close alongside now—he heard the swish of the other's screw going astern to stop the way. They were preparing to board! Why! Why not stand off and sink the Monleigh?—the Monleigh was probably sinking now. Yes, he knew why. They were afraid that what Mott had suggested might be true—that he in the darkness might escape in a boat.

He laughed suddenly. What was it Gunga had said? "A fight, sahib, that I would to Allah I might see again before I die!" Well, Gunga had not prayed to Allah in vain. Gunga would have his fight. They were going to board. God, how they lined the decks and rails out there—they were in their hundreds!

It was light now, like the play of lightning with the volleying of the small-arms. Aye, Gunga would have his fight! He laughed again wildly—and then terror came.

It seemed to freeze his soul with horror, unrelenting him, unrelenting him for an instant. What of her? And then Wallen's face drew into set, rigid lines, and there came into his eyes a look that was not good to see—and he turned and dashed below.

"Open, Gunga, quick!" he shouted. And as the door swung back: "Miss MacKay—both of you—this way!"

They ran out to meet him, and he caught her suddenly, standing her as there came a violent shock—and with the shock a hideous, louder outburst of yelling.

It was Ram Gulab Singh alongside! Half carrying her, half guiding her, Wallen, with Gunga behind, gained the top of the companionway, ran out onto the deck through the starboard door of the lounge room and, protected on this side by the deckhouses, rushed forward toward the bridge.

It was a last stand; that was all—ultimately the same as though they had remained below, except that here they could die fighting and not as rats in a trap.

He and Gunga could hold the bridge ladders until the Monleigh went down, or until at least every other part of the ship was in the hands of Ram Gulab Singh; and the charthouse would serve as a protection for her until—until—his brain went sick again with fear at thought of her—and it did not seem to be his voice that was shouting so reassuringly over the horrible babel around him.

"Up you go, Miss MacKay! That's it! Splendid! Now into the chart-room!" He pushed her almost forcibly inside—and swung toward Gunga. "Gunga, take the starboard ladder—I'll take the port."

Around him was an inferno; screams, shrieks, yells and cries, the shrill hiss of escaping steam, the sharp crackle of a flame leaping upward through the engine-room hatch, the crash and rattle of small-arm fire filled the air.

Below on the forward deck it was as though hell itself were loosed. The great looming shape of a vessel lay against the Monleigh's bow, from which, to join scores already there, white-clothed figures, like a horde of ghouls, poured onto the Monleigh's flush deck; and, as a fire-flame shot heavenward, illuminating the scene of daylight brightness, the naked steel of the ladders flickered in its downward sweep, and out of the features showed, and out of the features in a horribly incredible way the eyes glittered. And here and there upon the deck forms lay sprawled and prone as they had fallen.

Wallen ripped open a box of cartridges with his thumb nail, and let them tumble loose into his pocket, as he started over the weathercloth. What was left of the Monleigh's crew was already driven back on the ladders leading to the boat deck. Ram Gulab Singh was making short work of it—as he must!

With the Monleigh afire, even if the fire were still amiships, it was a precarious thing for that other vessel to lay there alongside! That was Layton and two of the crew on the starboard ladder fighting like demons; and directly below him, on the lower port ladder, were Mott and Larsen and two others—no, there were only Larsen and two of the crew—Mott had pitched downward into the sweep of a kris, seeming most curiously to meet the glint of it in mid air.

Six left!

What was the matter below there now? What was that infuriated, triumphant yell of the Malays, louder than any than had gone before? They were swarming up both ladders! Layton and Larsen from each side had given way—they were hidden under the bridge now, and he could not see, and—

Gunga's voice rang out: "Sahib, they come!"

In a flash Wallen swung about and dropped down full length on the bridge at the head of the port ladder, shouting to Gunga to do the same. He could understand now the sudden retreat from the low ladders.

The Malays had got off somehow and were now sweeping along the deck, screaming as they came, to take the Monleigh's men in the rear.

And now the light raged at the foot of his own ladder. Larsen and one man gained it—and Larsen toppled in a heap. The seaman, battling like a madman, made the first step of the ladder, the second, another—and then a form, leaping from the rack below, pulled the man backward and crashed down himself beside his victim, as Wallen's revolver streamed fire down the ladderway.

The last of the Monleigh's men was gone!

And then they came howling, screaming, mad with the blood-lust that was upon them, sweeping upward one after another—and one after the other went down before Wallen's fire, and the ladder steps grew cluttered, and Wallen laughed aloud. He could hold that ladder against a thousand of them—against all hell! A madness, a frenzy, was upon him. He laughed again. He could hear Gunga singing in a strange, croonlike way as he fought.

Another rush! He fired, fired once more—and then the hammer only clicked as he pulled the trigger. The magazine was empty!

He snatched at his pocket for cartridges, as the great form of a man, tall and gaunt, with distorted face, swept through the screaming mass below and sprang up the ladder.

There was no time to load—the man was almost at the top, with a dozen

"Ram Gulab Singh!" He Cried.

Sergeant Russell Mullen and wife are visiting in the home of the Sergeant's parents, Mr and Mrs. Frank Mullen, on North Walnut street.

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS CURWENSVILLE

Frank Whitaker, a son of Reuben Whitaker of Pike township, was in Clearfield one day this week and had his tonsils removed.

The immediate relatives and friends of Mrs. James Norris gave her a birthday party at her home last evening. A number of her immediate family were present. A most pleasant evening was spent by all present and at the close of the evening's sociabilities all departed for their homes wishing Mrs. Norris many happy days to come.

Amos Mattern and family returned home Tuesday after spending a two weeks outing in a visit to Mr. Mattern's old home and in Potter county.

Fred Kirk and wife are visiting in the home of Mrs. A. M. Kirk. He is the same jovial "Spud" as in days of yore.

David Read, of Glen Richey, is visiting his children on Irvin Hill this week.

Miss Jenette Patterson and Miss Marion Wels, of Clearfield, spent a portion of the week with Mrs. Walter Fullerton on Bloomington avenue.

Mrs. Joe Fullerton has returned home from a visit with relatives and friends at Bridgeport.

Messrs. Walter Norris and James Wise, of Pike township leased the fire clay rights on their farms last evening to the Mt. Union fire clay company. The transaction was made through that company's agent, Gilbert Wise.

So far this fall no one has heard the curfew bell ring as a warning to the youngsters to clear the streets and seek the protecting shelter of their homes.

Rev. Irvin P. Hawkins, whose illness has been mentioned from time to time in the Curwensville news letter, died at 3 o'clock A. M. yesterday, at his home on North Filbert street. Deceased was a native of North Carolina, and was united in marriage to a Virginia lady, who died at New Millport, 19 years ago last August. He entered the ministry in early manhood and for nine years preached in the south. Removing from his southern home he came to Confluence and Addison, Pa., remaining there for three years. His next charge was at Lilly, where he remained some five years. His next charge was at New Millport, this county, where he remained for five years and then accepted a call to Keewardin, residing there four years. Twelve years ago he came to Curwensville and became pastor of Grace Lutheran church and also of the church at Mahaffey, preaching alternately at each charge. He was aged 66 years. He is survived by three daughters and three sons, viz: Mrs. E. P. Gilliland, of La Junta, Cal., Miss Elizabeth and Marion at home, Paul and Glen residing in Cal., and Dr. D. B. Hawkins, who was in Texas, but arrived home the day before his father's death. Since first stricken on Easter Sunday, Rev. Hawkins preached but two sermons, one at Mahaffey and the other here. During his residence in Curwensville deceased made many warm friends, who deeply sympathize with the family in their bereavement. The funeral will be held on Sunday. Interment in the family plot at New Millport.

Sergeant Russell Mullen and wife are visiting in the home of the Sergeant's parents, Mr and Mrs. Frank Mullen, on North Walnut street.

followers behind him. Wallen leaped to his feet and with clubbed revolver lunged forward.

And then suddenly the great white beam of a searchlight from seaward played for an instant over the bridge—and in the white light Wallen looked into the eyes of Ram Gulab Singh—and knew it was Ram Gulab Singh, because the hand that clutched at the ladder's side rope was fingerless, save for the forefinger.

"Ram Gulab Singh!" he cried, and struck with all his might—and missed. The whir of the other's kris sang in his ear as he flung himself sideways to avoid the blow.

"You have your father's face, you rat!" the man shrieked, and lifted the blade to swing again.

The white light was gone—searching along the length of the ship. Again Wallen struck in the light of the flames now that were bursting, angry, venomous, with a roar and hiss, from the engine-room hatch, and this time the other reeled back as the blow went home.

But the next instant the man behind Ram Gulab Singh on the ladder reached forward between his leader's legs and jerked Wallen's feet from beneath him. There was a scream of triumph from Ram Gulab Singh; and as Wallen, losing his balance, pitched forward, he caught the flash of the whirling kris coming down upon him.

And then, in the fraction of a second that followed, even as he felt the blade, stimulated a thousandfold, absorbing details, registered them upon his consciousness. The blade, within an inch of his head, seemed to fly off into the air as though torn from the other's hands; a revolver roared behind him, the hot breath of it on his face, and Ram Gulab Singh flung up his hands; his voice was calling his name again and again—and then he had smashed his fists full into Ram Gulab Singh.

Mechanically his arms locked around the other; and hurtling downward over the sprawled bodies on the ladder-steps, howling those behind over like ninepins, Wallen spun, twisting and turning in the air, a dead man clutched in his embrace, and crashed upon the deck, and his arms relaxed, and he lay still.

When he opened his eyes he was in Gunga's arms, and Helen MacKay was binding something about his head; and there was a strange stillness about him—strange because the roar of the flames was stillness where it seemed there should be shouts and cries and demagogical screams and the clash of arms and the shrieks of dying men.

He staggered up to his feet. Sailors in naval uniform were running about the decks, and a romping officer was peering into his face. Wallen tried to place the other, and failed at first, because his head was swimming so dizzily; and then he remembered that it was Lieutenant Damon, of the gunboat York, who had crossed with him once in the Tokomaru.

"A narrow squeak, old chap!" Damon was saying, with a grin on Wallen's hand. "The old York's chasing those devils out there now—hear the guns! We got the whole story from Miss MacKay two days ago. The commander sent me off with a couple of boats' crews in the hope that we'd find some of you alive; and he sent me because I'd know you, Wallen, my boy—if you were really Wallen."

"I—I don't understand," said Wallen weakly.

"No—I dare say not!" Damon laughed cheerily. "And there isn't much time now to explain; we've got to take to the boat. But, in a word, Miss MacKay here wirelessly your servant's story to Singapore and asked for help for herself, giving a nautical position that she said she had succeeded in getting from the second officer. You had a day's start of us, but you must have been averaging over twelve knots, or we'd have come up sooner."

"They didn't know what to make of that story of Drink-House Sam's murder as your servant told it, but they rounded up the Chinese and Malays that he accused; and two of them confessed, implicating the others. That clears you, old man. Here—steady! Don't wobble like that! I'll get a couple of my men to carry you to the boat." He turned away, hurrying along the deck.

Wallen's hand, raised to sweep across his eyes, touched the hand that, nor so deftly now, a little tremblingly now, was still making a pretense at knotting the bandage.

"You—you sent—the story—my story," he said eagerly. "Then—you believed me all the time!" "Then—you believed me all the time!" "Then—you believed me all the time!" "Then—you believed me all the time!"

And then her head bent lower, very close to his, and her cheek brushed his—and it was wet with tears.

"Helen!" he whispered.

"Come on!" called Damon, returning. "We'll have to tumble into the boat. The commander said I was to take you ashore and wait for the York to get back; but there's a fellow out there—a Scotsman—who's come out from shore in a big boat that I passed as we came aboard, and that'll be better than a three-mile pull."

"He can't come alongside, of course—too risky a maneuver with the head-way the fire's made off—but he's waiting for us. In the ward I had with him when I told him to stand by, he seemed to know you, Wallen."

And then, as though to corroborate Damon's words, across the water came a hail in a strong, big voice.

"Abroad there!" Wallen: "The Mac-Knight of Arru, Wallen! Men, is it

College night has now come to be a regular feature of the early September meetings in Trinity church, and will be observed Sunday night.

With a splendid program including special music by the choir and a male quartet and an address by A. D. Bigley, president of the Clearfield Board of Education who is still close enough to his college days at Princeton university to speak intimately on the subject of "The Opportunities of Col-
